This class is offered to beginners but all skill levels are welcome! Stephanie is an avid clay lover and is excited to introduce people to the ceramics world. Her class will cover all aspects of working with clay, but will focus mainly on wheel throwing. During the class, students will see demonstrations on the potter's wheel, as well as hand building techniques. Then they will be able to explore these processes at their own pace. Students will be encouraged to use all the tools and equipment the studio has to offer while they explore all things clay in a fun and relaxed environment.

Intermediate to Advanced. Co-taught by Adam and Vianney, the first six weeks of this course will focus on teacups, teabowls, yunomis, chawans, and other “satellite” items surrounding the teapot, while the second half will culminate in the making of teapots and completing sets. Although some hand-building techniques will be demonstrated, the focus will be on the wheel, namely discussing strategies for creating consistent sets, throwing off the hump, and ultimately assembling teapots and dealing with the challenges of their many parts. Some experience making lids and handles and throwing off the hump is recommended but not mandatory.
